Bud, Jim,

More on the "investigative file exemption, again from my proof reading (17-12):

Clark says, "the effect of the language in exemption (7)", the one on the right to withhold investigatory files cited by both Kleindienst and Lyerly, that it "seems to confirm the availability to litigants of documentary from investigatory files to the extent to which Congress and the courts have made them available to such litigants." The only possible avoidence he mentions is if such statements "contain infirmation unfairly damaging to the litigants or other persons"

This is from 38. Man, it even says damaging stuff must be available, unless it is "unfairly damaging."

How apt for the Ferrie complaint.

But not good for Sirhan?
